Not to be shared until public release for comment next week, but please look through this and see what you think, particularly Annexes C and D.

David.

Dear David,

Please find attached the final document re-endorsed by the PPR Panel.

Now the public consultation process is being prepared and is expected to be launched on Monday June 12th until July 28th (7 weeks).

Should you, or US-EPA, consider the need of making comments, there will be the possibility of doing so by using the procedure indicated at the EFSA website once the public consultation is open.

Best,
Antonio

That's fine. I thought it would be early June or so, so have been checking the EFSA website each day or two in case I missed it.

Glad to hear it will be next week or so when it will be released to the public.

David.

Dear David,

I regret having had you with an information blackout for some time.

In fact, the Scientific Committee welcome the document but wanted to have some time for its review to rule out any potential conflict with the remit of other Panels. Then, in the May WG meeting we addressed the comments raised by the SC and circulated again the opinion to the PPR Panel members for their consideration. Today is the deadline for receiving feed-back and next June 10th the opinion will be launched for public consultation. Nevertheless, I will send it to you before, just once some minor changes will be incorporated, let's say in couple of days as tomorrow I will be outside Granada.

You will hear from me soon.

Thank you very much for your contribution and interest shown in this.

Best,

Antonio

Asunto: status of epi document

Dear Antonio,

Is there any news on the status of the epi document and when it might be coming out. I know it was delayed for a short time so that EFSA could ensure that there weren't conflicts with epi parts of other EFSA documents. Did that go ok? And is it expected to be out soon?

David
